Jamieson Smith was born December 10 1810 in Hexham, Northumberland, England of John Smith and his wife Isabella. Jamieson Smith was first inducted into military service in the 83rd Regiment of Foot (Royal Irish Rifles) on April 3, 1827, at age 16 years. He was subsequently posted to British Army garrisons about the world (Canada, Ireland, India, Gibraltar), attained the rank of NCO (Sergeant), and became married to Isabella Robson, a daughter of William Robson and his wife Jane. Isabella accompanied Jamieson to the various posts, where their children were born.

Jamieson was transferred by the army for duty in Canada by the freighter Brunswick in the year 1834, and was subsequently posted to Halifax, Quebec City, Montreal, Kingston, London, and Fort York, Toronto. He was transferred back to England on June 16, 1843. On its return to England, the regiment was distributed to a number of depot around the country, and was later reassembled and sent to various trouble spots in Ireland, and eventually dispatched to India. During this tour of duty, a son Mathew was born on board the ship Brunswick as it approached Halifax and while stationed at Halifax a daughter Margaret was born in 1837.

Mathew Smith married Emily Dodd in 1859, and settled in the Markham area. For the 1851 Census of England Mathew gave his occupation as Apprentice Carpenter, and in the Census of Canada for 1861, he gave his occupation as Cabinet Maker. Mathew and Emily had 7 children. He is buried in Mount Pleasant Cemetery in Toronto, Ontario.

A daughter Mary Ann was born in 1839 while Jamieson was stationed at Fort Henry, Kingston. During this period, the 83rd Regiment was stationed at Kingston in fear of invasion from the United States in support of the recent Rebellion of 1837. 500 regulars of the 83rd Regiment took part in the Battle of the Windmill near Prescott, Upper Canada in November of 1838. These regulars along with 1100 members of the Canadian Militia defeated an invasion of 250 American Hunter invaders who were attempting to capture Fort Wellington at Prescott.*

The major structures centred around a parade square. It was bounded by the soldiers quarters to the North, the Officer's quarters to the South, the hospital compound to the West, and the canteen, cells, defaulters room and powder magazines to the East. There are no remains of the post today.*

Matilda married Edwin Appleton (the author's great grandfather) in 1858, in Markham, York County, Upper Canada. Matilda was living in London, Ontario at 718 Queens Avenue, when she died in 1916. She is buried in St Luke's Cemetery, Vienna, Ontario.

Daughter Rebecca Smith married Edwin Appleton's brother Ambrose in 1872 at St James Anglican Church in Ingersoll Ontario. Ambrose and Rebecca owned and operated the Appleton House hotel on Dundas Street in London, Ontario before moving to Windsor and Detroit. They are both buried in Windsor Ontario.

During the period in England, Jamieson's spouse Isabella died after the birth of another daughter Catherine. Isabella is reported buried in the grounds of Hexham Abbey in Northumberland. The Smith family and all children were Anglicans and daughter Matilda is said to have been a member of the Hexham Abbey choir during her time there.

Having served a full 21 years of enlistment in the British Army, Jamieson and his family were returned to England from India, and he was honorably discharged , aged 39, on June 25, 1850, at the Chatham dockyards. Jamieson and the entire family were enumerated in the 1851 Census of England living at 27 Hencotes Street. This census identifies another son John aged 25 living with the family.

With a minor pension from the army, Jamieson and his entire family (not sure about John migrating to Canada) emigrated back to Canada and to the Markham, Ontario district. Isabella's parents and other family members had preceded them, settling in this area about 1830.

The youngest daughter of Jamieson Smith also married another of the Appleton brothers. Catherine Smith married Lawrence Appleton in 1865 at St Luke's in Vienna, Ontario, Canada. Catherine and Lawrence moved west living for a time in North Dakota and eventually ending in the area around San Francisco. Both are buried in Mount Olivet Cemetery in San Francisco.

Matilda

Matilda Smith was the daughter of Jamieson Smith a regular in the British Army. She was born at the Wooden Barracks (sometimes called "Framed Barracks") in London during the period when her father was stationed there. The Wooden Barracks was located in the northwest corner of London's Victoria Park. It is no longer standing, but the University (UWO) has an infrared image of the Wooden Barracks.

As part of an army family, Matilda was returned to England with her father's regiment. This regiment was decommissioned and the family returned to North America.

Family history claims that during their stay in England, she sang in the choir at Hexham Abbey, Hexham, England.

On 24 Mar 1858 Matilda married Edwin Appleton, son of Thomas Joseph Appleton (23 Jun 1809-13 Dec 1869) & Jane Ann Horner (10 Jan 1809-17 Aug 1883), at Markham Township, York County, Ontario, Canada.<sup>94,229</sup> Edwin was born in Knaresborough, Harrowgate District, Yorkshire (North Riding), England, on 6 Dec 1835.<sup>817</sup> Edwin was baptized at Knaresborough, Harrowgate District, Yorkshire (North Riding), England; St Mary's Chapel (RC), on 13 Dec 1835.<sup>817</sup> Edwin was on the census for Markington, Township of Bishop Moncton, Harrowgate District, Yorkshire, England, in 1841.<sup>463</sup> Edwin was on the census for Hamilton, Wentworth County, Ontario, Canada; Catherine Street, in 1851.<sup>222</sup> Resided in 1858 at Markham Township, York County, Ontario, Canada.<sup>94</sup> Resided in 1871 at Ingersoll, Oxford County, Ontario, Canada.<sup>497</sup> Edwin was on the census for Ingersoll, Oxford County, Ontario, Canada, in 1871.<sup>497</sup> Resided in 1881 at Vienna, Bayham Township, Elgin County, Ontario, Canada.<sup>96</sup> Edwin was on the census for Vienna, Bayham Township, Elgin County, Ontario, Canada, in 1881.<sup>96</sup> Edwin died - Bayham Township, Elgin County, Ontario, Canada, on 21 Oct 1919; he was 83.<sup>89,228,46</sup> Buried on 23 Oct 1919 in Vienna, Ontario, Canada; St Luke's Anglican Church Cemetery.<sup>49,89,68</sup> Occupation: 1861, Blacksmith.<sup>462</sup> Occupation: 1871, Blacksmith.<sup>497</sup> Occupation: 1881, Blacksmith.<sup>96</sup> Occupation: 1875, Blacksmith, Vienna.<sup>1404</sup>

Edwin

Edwin Appleton, a son of Thomas and Jane Appleton, was born December 6, 1835, near Knaresborough, an old market town in West Riding Yorkshire, and baptized at St. Mary's R.C. church there. Edwin next appears on record at Bishop Monkton, a village a few miles to the North and near the city of Ripon. At age 5, he is enumerated there in the Census of England, 1841, with his family.

In the year 1851, he immigrated with his family to Canada. In the Canadian census of 1851, he and the family are reported in Hamilton, Ontario. His occupation is recorded as a blacksmith and woodworker.

Some months later, he travelled with the family to Ingersoll, Ontario, where they remained for a few years. Later, Edwin moved to Vienna, Ontario, in Elgin County, then a burgeoning community, where the father had bought land and had established a home working as a gardener. However, by April 1896, he is noted, per the Markham Economist, as living in the town of Markham in York County, where he was employed and apprenticed to the Speight Wagon Works, pursuing his trade in company with a future brother-in-law, Matthew Smith. He became acquainted with pioneers William Robson and Jamieson Smith and their families during this time. In March of 1858, Edwin married Matilda Smith, daughter of the latter.

Edwin and Matilda returned to his old home in Vienna, Ontario. Near which (at Grovesend, a developing settlement a few miles to the West along the Lake), he took over a blacksmithing enterprise. Then, in 1859, a daughter Jane Isabella was born. Following this, the 1861 decennial census of Canada records the family back in Vienna, Ontario, a more favourable location for his trade. Then, in March of the following year, 1862, a second daughter Anne came to them.

In the year 1866, a disturbed period when enemy Fenian Raids from the United States menaced the country, he, with many other young men from the village and surrounding area, joined the Canadian Militia and were encamped along the border near Sarnia, Ontario. They were disbanded when the excitement subsided, and he returned home. In recognition of his services, he eventually was given a grant of land in isolated Northern Ontario, which his son John went to inspect. After continuing as far as Earlton, named after the son of its founder Sam Brasher, who had been a native of Vienna and who was then in charge of a post office there, he considered the land inaccessible, and Edwin arranged to sell to a man more familiar with the area.

Following his father's death in 1869, Edwin and his family moved to Ingersoll, Ontario. His mother and those who remained with her had also gone to Ingersoll, according to the 1871 census of Canada. He was employed as a machinist at the Noxon Machinery Foundry; however, in the following year, 1872, he returned to Vienna, as is noted in annual assessment rolls for the village (Weldon Collection, U.W.O.). He took up residence at Centre Street, the old home of his mother and father, Thomas. He resumed blacksmithing and chain forging and the building of heavy wagons, lumbering being then a vigorous occupation in the area, at a shop set up at 6 Front St. there, and in which he continued through the year 1881, as is noted in village assessment rolls.

In 1882, he undertook an exploratory journey to the Canadian northwest and eventually returned to a residence in London, Ontario, at Dundas and Quebec Streets). He obtained employment at the Maxwell Foundry in St. Marys, Ontario, and his son John has recalled his walking from there to London on occasion. In August of 1883, his mother passed away at the home of a daughter near Vienna in Bayham Township.

In the year 1884 (March, per the Tillsonburg Observer news), he again returned to Vienna, partly because of the poor health of a son Frank, who was not a robust lad and whose death occurred late in that year. In 1887, a disastrous series of fires occurred in the village, and a large part of his wagon shop burned. In September of 1900, at a Balcom planing mill near the shop, an accident occurred in which he suffered the loss of two fingers from his right hand, and after he retired from the shop.

In June 1903, he bought a home with 17 acres of land (paying the sum of $800 at the time) in the village. Later, the residence and adjoining land, known to the family as the Foy place, was sold. They moved to the home of a son in London, where his wife Matilda passed away in 1916. Edwin passed away in October of 1919 at the farm home of a son John in Vienna, Ontario and was buried at St. Luke's in the family plot there. It had been his wish to remain alive to observe the end of World War 1, which he had done.

His life, in retrospect, had been one of many hardships and developments typical in a growing country. But, nevertheless, he is considered determined, perhaps a bit self-contained, as is usual of the generation and the breed.<sup>1511</sup>

Ambrose

Ambrose Appleton, a son of Thomas and Jane Appleton, was born at Bishop Moncton, a hamlet nearby the city of Ripon in West Riding of Yorkshire, and baptized at the church Chapel at Bishop Thorton, a few miles away.

In about 1850, he was brought to Canada by his parents with other brothers and sisters. He is in Hamilton, Ontario, in the 1851 census of Canada. Later, he moved on with the family to Ingersoll, Ontario. A few years later, they all settled in Vienna, Ontario, where they were recorded in the 1861 census of Canada. Ambrose remained in Vienna until the death of his father in December 1869. Toward the end of 1869, he was a sponsor at the baptism of a cousin James Frederick Fay at the RC church in Vienna. Sometime later, he returned to Ingersoll with the widow Jane and a brother and sister.

He appears in the decennial census of The 1871 census reports that Ambrose is 23 years old, a cabinet-maker and painter living in Ingersoll. Ambrose was married to Rebecca Smith, a sister to the wife of a brother Edwin and a younger sister who was the wife of another brother Lawrence at the Anglican Church in Ingersoll on May 7, 1872. He was employed as a carpenter in the city of St Thomas, Ontario and subsequently, he followed a brother Albert to London, Ontario. He is described in the London City Directory of 1874-75 as a carpenter and Albert as a cabinet-maker, a trade at which both became increasingly adept. As recalled by a nephew Edward Comisky of Ingersoll, they were employed constructing burial coffins.

Ambrose acquired ownership of the Crown Hotel in a suburb of London named Lilly's Corners (known today as London East.) With some assistance from his brother Albert, he proceeded to construct a sizeable addition. Ambrose is listed as the proprietor of the hotel renamed the Appleton House at 621-625 Dundas Street in the London city directory for 1881-82. This hotel and its stables are still standing. The hotel is on Dundas street, 5 doors east of Adelaide St. The stables are on the street running behind Dundas street on the south side.

Ambrose and his wife moved to Windsor, Ontario, where he became the proprietor of the Manning House hotel (renamed the Majestic Hotel) located at 239 Ouellette Avenue until 1912 when the property was sold to the Royal Bank. Differences with his wife Rebecca had persisted so that concurrent with the sale of the hotel property and a financial settlement with her, Ambrose moved to Detroit, Michigan and took up residence at 7442 Dexter Boulevard. Although Ambrose and Rebecca did not have any children themselves, they adopted Marjorie [Foley].

Ambrose passed away in Detroit in 1923 and after cremation was returned to Windsor and buried in St John's Cemetery. Rebecca survived him in Windsor. She lived with Marjorie on Ouellette Avenue until May 11, 1936. She was buried with Ambrose in St John's Cemetery. Marjorie died in 1941 and is buried near Ambrose and Rebecca.<sup>1511</sup>

An excerpt from The London Advertiser - Date September 25, 1882

Friday night at nine o'clock a band, or part of a band, said to be a portion of the 28th Battalion Band, accompanied by a mixed crowd of volunteers, assembled in front of Appleton's Hotel, corner of Dundas & Adelaide streets. The musicians, whoever they were, after playing a tune or two, dashed into the barroom in an excited manner and demanded liquor. Mr. Appleton, not liking the look of things, demanded they pay in advance, whereupon a row commenced. The landlord was roughly handled, his waistcoat and even shirt being torn off him. Still, he, assisted by a few civilians, held his own. No doubt he and they would have been overpowered had it not been for the timely arrival of reinforcements under Constable Nichol's two sons, powerful young men. The civilians' turn now came, and in less time than it takes to describe the affair, the floor of the barroom was fairly strewn with volunteers. The men outside now clamoured to get in, but the civilians, who were armed with sticks, and one man with an iron shutter bar, stretched them as fast as they came to the door. At length, the volunteers said "Let us go back to camp and get our bayonets; we'll soon clear them out. The crowd then left, taking their wounded with them. The floor of the barroom was fairly covered with blood, and it is most extraordinary that no one was killed, as it is said the cudgel and even the iron bar descended on more than one head. One volunteer had a horrible slash across the face, a wound he will carry with him as long as he lives. It appears Appleton's was the second hotel visited that night. At Barton's, near the grounds, the volunteers had things pretty much their own way, and any civilian who interfered was soon laid out. Capt. Mossip, the officer, affirms that the report in circulation, that some of the 28th Band boys demanded liquor or were in the fight is not correct and that he can prove, the boys and their instruments never left the campground after 8 o'clock.

Lawrence Appleton, a son of Thomas and Jane Appleton, was born May 11, 1841, at Bishop Monkton, a hamlet nearby the city of Ripon, West Riding Yorkshire, and baptized at their church in Bishop Thornton, a few miles away.

In a review of the 1841 decennial census of England for Bishop Monkton, his name is found with parents and family there. His family brought him to Hamilton, Ontario, Canada, in 1851-52. As a lad of 12, his name appears with those of parents and family in the decennial census of 1851-52.

Later he moved westward with the family to Ingersoll, Ontario and sometime later to Vienna, Ontario. However, for the 1861 census of Canada, his name is not shown with others of the family in Vienna. Therefore, at 21, he may have been employed elsewhere. However, in annual assessment rolls for the village, his name is again noted in a separate residence, for the years 1864 through 1869, employed as a carpenter, boat building at nearby Port Burwell. During this period, 1864-65, he was married to Catherine Smith, a sister to his brother Edwin's wife Matilda, and they had a child Frances, and later a son Wallace.

He had become a knowledgeable cabinet-maker, a trade he pursued after that, and in the year 1871, he had returned to Ingersoll, Ontario, where with father-in-law Jamieson Smith the family is entered in the census for that year.

In or shortly before 1879, with his wife and children, he embarked on a journey to the American middle west. This area was currently experiencing a flood of newcomers, coupled with the fast-moving railway construction during the period.

He settled and found employment in Minneapolis, Minnesota, later becoming the construction business owner there. Subsequently, Lawrence disposed of the business, and the family moved westward to San Francisco, where Lawrence established another construction business.

He is said to have encountered ill fortune, occasioned by a severe earthquake and fire that hit the region (1900) and consequently lost heavily.

A son Alfred Sidney became a prominent clothing merchant in neighbouring San Jose, passing away in 1947. An older son Wallace became identified with the Southern Pacific Railway Co. and passed away in 1949. A daughter Margaret Isabella had married and had moved southward to San Luis Obispo, where she remained until her death circa 1960.

The family maintained contact with the family of a brother to Lawrence, Albert Appleton, in Seattle and Margaret Isabella with her older sister Frances Theresa (Fannie), of whom little is known, is reported to have lived there in the year 1912. The family had broken up after the death of the parents.

Lawrence passed away on December 27, 1905, in San Jose, and the family buried him in Mount Olivet cemetery there. His wife Catherine had preceded him in November 1904.<sup>1511</sup>

They had the following children:

- i. Franci[e]s Theresa “Fanny” (1865-1915)
- ii. Wallace (1867-1949)
- iii. Rebecca “Nellie”<sup>345</sup> (1869-<1871)
- iv. Alfred Sidney (1873-1947)
- v. Charles (1876-1877)
- vi. Margaret Isabella (1879-1960)

Jamieson Smith 1810

5 January 1962

Dear Sir,

No. 562 Sergeant James Smith
H.M. 83rd Regiment of Foot

In reply to your letter of 29th November received here from the War Office Record Centre, the Pay Lists and Muster Rolls of the 83rd Regt. from 1835 to 1845, W.O.12/8695-8705 fail to reveal any N.C.O. or Private of the name of Jamieson Smith.

There were two Sergeant James Smiths in that period:

(1) No. 121. Born Harlow, Essex circa 1797, by trade a carpenter, discharged 27th November 1837 at Chester.

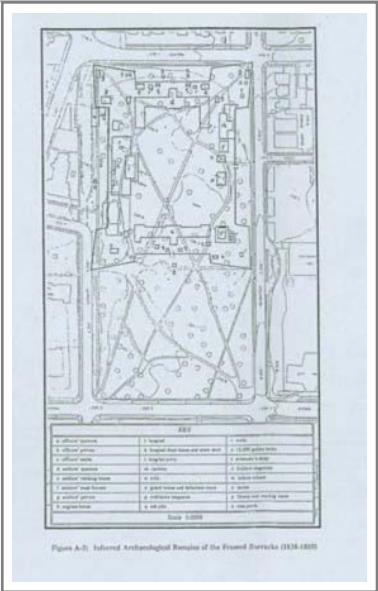

X (2) No. 562. Born Hexham, Northumberland circa 1811, by trade a servant, discharged 25th June 1850 at Chatham.

The Discharge Certificates and records of service of both the above have been traced in W.O.97/931. At that time the War Office maintained no records of soldiers wives or families. Certain "Regimental Registers of the Marriages of Soldiers and Births and Baptisms of their Children" are preserved at the General Register Office, Somerset House, but, unfortunately, in the case of the 83rd Regt. (later Royal Irish Rifles) these have not been preserved before the year 1876.

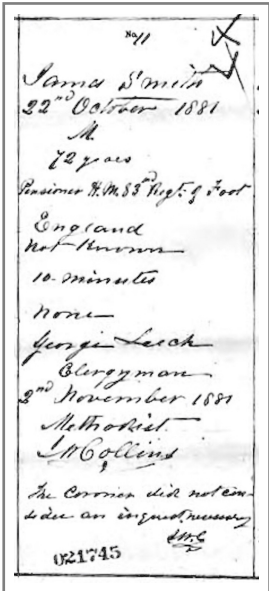

Yours faithfully,

M. Godfrey
 for Secretary.
